World Hears of New Pact

News Reaches Russia
MOSCOW, Russia.—(P)—The news that America finally had recognized the Soviet government came to Moscow shortly after midnight Saturday and found Soviet officialdom in bed. Due to the hour, there was no official comment available, either on recognition or the appointment of William C. Bullitt as the American ambassador to the Soviet Union.

It was said that Bullitt is bound to meet favor here, because of his efforts to persuade President Wilson to recognize the Bolsheviks during the Versailles Peace conference. Observers had little doubt that American recognition will be the cause of enormous elation all over Russia, where the people have been puzzled so many years at the apparently hostile attitude of official Washington.

Japan Undisturbed
TOKIO.—(P)—Learning of the United States' recognition of Russia, a Foreign Office spokesman said diplomatically Saturday "Japan welcomes the resumption of diplomatic relations between two great powers with which she herself is in friendly intercourse."

"This cannot affect Japan's position in the Orient," the foreign spokesman said, "and I am confident that the Japanese people will receive the news without alarm, believing it is in no wise adverse to Japan economically or politically."

Japanese newspapers indicated the establishment of Russo-American relations was the biggest foreign news in months, flooding the streets with extras. The shouts of newsmen and the jangling of bells carried the tidings to crowded on their way to work.

Authoritative non-Japanese sources expressed the opinion that the American decision to return the United States fleet from the Pacific to the Atlantic had largely forestalled any Japanese resentment at the recognition, interpreting it as a gesture of friendship to Japan offsetting a similar move toward the Soviet.

$520,000,000 U. S. Trade
WASHINGTON.—(P)—Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, the Russian trade advisor to the Farm Administration, predicted that a potential annual trade of $520,000,000 would grow out of Russian recognition.

In addition, Brookhart, who said he had consistently urged recognition since 1923, asserted that resumption of diplomatic relations "means more to the peace of the world than almost any event at this time."

Specifically, Brookhart asserted that if "adequate credit can be arranged," the United States faces the opportunity of making these sales to Russia in the "very near future."

DeQueen Smashed by Rebuilt Team of Hope Bobcats

Locals Blank Visiting Eleven 24 to 0 Friday Night

TWO SCORES EARLY

Madison, Harper and Hargis Make Consistent Gains

Hope's rebuilt Bobcat football team functioned smoothly here Friday night to blank a DeQueen High School eleven, 24 to 0.

Opening the game with a hard running attack, the Bobcats marched down the field twice for touchdowns in the first quarter, with Madison, Harper and Hargis carrying the ball for consistent gains through the line and around the ends.

Harper, replacing Pete Brown at quarterback, the latter being lost of the squad on account of a broken collar bone, handled the team like a veteran. Besides his ability at directing plays, Harper carried the ball on several occasions, getting away for nice runs.

Although handicapped with an injured shoulder, Mutt Hargis, Bobcat fullback, slashed and battered his way through the DeQueen line when given an opportunity. Hargis made two of the team's touchdowns.

As the second quarter got underway the Bobcats started for another touchdown, and soon scored their third marker. Try for extra point failed as the two attempts did in the first quarter, the half ending with the Bobcats 18 points in the lead.

Hope had the visitors on the defense during the greater part of the first half. The Leopards never seriously threatened to score. Only once did they get within Hope's 25-yard line, and that resulted from a pass.

Team Plays Well
Hope had expected to meet stubborn resistance from the DeQueen squad, but the shakeup in the Bobcat team on account of the loss of five regulars due to injuries, apparently didn't make it as much as at first believed. The team blocked well, fought hard and was alert to take advantage of breaks.

Hope's defensive, which had shown weak spots in the last two games, seemed improved.

Toward the end of the third quarter the Bobcats scored their final touchdown. It resulted from a sustained drive down the field with

Blevins Continues Winning Streak

Hempstead Eleven Goes to Amity and Wins by 2 to 0

Blevins High School continued its winning streak Friday afternoon with a victory over Amity after one of the hardest games of the season. The score was 2 to 0.

Blevins blocked a punt behind the Amity goal line. An Amity player recovered, resulting in the safety.

It was Amity High School's homecoming game and their seventh defeat of the season. Amity's only victory was over Mena, 12 to 0.

Blevins made 14 first downs as compared to four for Amity. Both teams completed but few of the many forward passes tossed throughout the contest.

Line play of the Blevins team was outstanding.

Vice-president, J. I. McClurkin, Prescott; treasurer, Crawford Greene, Blytheville; member of the board of trustees, Dr. J. R. Grant, president of Ouachita college; corresponding secretary, Miss Opal Albright, re-elected.

Hays Files New Election Contest

He Attacks Terry as Not Being a Qualified Elector

LITTLE ROCK — A supplemental complaint including specific allegations of violations of the corrupt practice act, an allegation that the defendant was not a qualified elector and therefore not eligible to hold office, and asking that the certificate of nomination of David D. Terry to Congress from the Fifth district be cancelled, was filed in Third District Circuit Court by attorneys for Brooks Hays Friday.

Judge Harris Friday morning granted a motion by Hays' attorneys for permission to file the supplemental complaint, on the grounds that an election contest may be instituted within 20 days of the certification of the nominee by the secretary and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Spirit of Walsh Is Over Election Probe

Investigator Charges Committee Is Endeavoring to Cover Up Facts, Not Expose Them

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The voice of the late Senator Tom Walsh of Montana is barking at the special Senate committee investigating the Overton election in Huey Long's committee.

It makes the committee look more like a bunch of sick cats than any other that ever spent a taxpayer's nickel.

Young John Holland, the chief investigator, who denounced the Connally committee of New Orleans for its seeming obedience to Huey, was

Threaten to Drop It
NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Unless charges are filed in the United States Senate against Senator John H. Overton (Democrat, Louisiana) on behalf of the people of Louisiana, Senator M. M. Logan, (Democrat, Kentucky) member of the committee investigating the Overton election, said Friday night all of the testimony taken in New Orleans last February and this week might be thrown out, as at present there are no formal charges in the senate against the Louisiana senator.

The failure of ex-senator Edwin Brunsard, he said, to follow up his charges of fraud and corruption with an election contest left no formal charges before the Senate.

"The people should prefer charges against Senator Overton and against Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat, Louisiana), too, if they want to," said the Kentucky senator. The testimony could be saved, he said, if charges were filed.

Walsh's protege, trusted confidante of that great inquisitor, he learned how Senate investigations were run when prosecuted honestly and relentlessly. Walsh never was afraid of anyone.

Holland dug up the facts for Walsh in the Teapot Dome scandal and watched the old bulldog hound Fall, Sinclair, and Doheny to obliquity. Walsh called him in again for the sensational lobby investigations. Walsh had given Holland his first job in the senator's own office here.

So you can imagine how Holland felt when he found senators bottling up his evidence in the election case of Huey Long's other Senator, John Overton. There was too much of Tom Walsh's spirit and integrity in Holland to allow him to keep on taking it.

He blew up with an amazingly loud bang—called Chairman Connally "yellow" and charged the committee with "covering up for the rat from Louisiana."

His friends here were astonished. But they knew how he felt. They Huey Long, at a nearby table, was the third target of Holland's denunciation.

Kiwanis Finishes Tour of Schools

Rev. Geo. F. X. Strassner Tells of Interest in Essay Contest

Most county schools have been visited recently by the Rev. Geo. F. X. Strassner, representing the essay committee of the Kiwanis club, he told the local civic club at their Friday night meeting in the New Capital hotel dining room. This contest closes Thanksgiving day, and is open to all youths between the ages of 15 and 20 inclusive, who live in South Nevada county or Hempstead county, outside Hope Special school district. Nineteen prizes are offered by Kiwanis club members.

"The interest of the students of Hempstead county in this essay contest, and in the visits of the committee member, indicates tremendous possibilities for civic club work during next year," The Rev Strassner told the club.

Club president J. R. Floyd named A. E. Stonequist to head a committee to investigate the sale of medicines, and other products, on the curbs in the downtown section of Hope. It was pointed out that there is a large number of curbside salesmen working Hope recently, and the committee was asked to see whether all are paying the required city license.

A Kiwanis club squirrel dinner is scheduled for next Thursday night, to displace the regular Friday night program. Sid Bundy and C. F. Erwin head this committee.

V. P. Squadron Five-F, under Lieut. Comm. D. M. Carpenter, flew from Norfolk, Va., to the fleet air base at Coco Solo, C. Z., and established a new non-stop formation seaplane record of 2059 miles in 25 hours and 29 minutes.

SAVANNAH, Ga.—(P)—President Roosevelt hailed Russian recognition as a world aid, and to the people of Georgia expressed scorn of "doubting Thomases" on his gold control monetary program, on his arrival here Saturday, beginning a vacation.

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States Saturday demanded "an early return to a gold basis with complete avoidance of monetary experimentation," in a resolution adopted by 50 business leaders comprising the directors, after a two-day review of the economic situation.

It said:
"We believe it should be emphasized that the present fiscal policies have developed wide-spread confusion and distrust. We strongly recommend that the president of the United States make an unmistakable declaration that government securities will not be driven to lower levels by reason of monetary activities. We urge immediate announcement of a complete avoidance of monetary experimentation, currency manipulation, greenbackism, and fiat money."

In behind the conversations successfully concluded Friday between Russia and the United States was the desire of both countries for peace and for the strengthening of the peaceful purpose of the civilized world.

The president struck at critics of his monetary program with these words: "It has been remarked of late by certain Tories that those who are today in charge of your national government are guilty of great experimentation."

He Raps Critics
"If I read my history right, the same suggestion was used when Englishmen, protesting in vain against the intolerable conditions at home, founded new colonies in the American wilderness—and again when Washington and Adams and Bulloch conducted another great experiment in 1776."

He declared that in the short space of one year "we can cure a chronic illness that has beset us for a dozen years."

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

RECOGNITION of Russia gives the Roosevelt administration credit for bringing to an end a sixteen-year silent war waged by American reactionaries against the particular form of government the Russian people chose to be ruled by.

The attitude of the late President Wilson could be understood. Those were war days—and our enemy, Germany, had helped Bolshevik agents get into Russia. But our attitude under later presidents, when the Soviet was beyond question the established government of Russia, was stubborn and costly.

Mr. Roosevelt, for all the fine theories of some of his advisors, is a realist. A realist sees in government merely the agent of the people of that country. And the president has determined to

YOUR CHILDREN

School, Home Influences Guide Child's Conduct

Not long ago a teacher said to me, "I had the greatest encouragement to-day that I've met with for a long time."

"You see, I talk to the children in school about kindness and honesty, perseverance and loyalty and all the virtues. Every time I get a chance I illustrate a characteristic of some great man or woman."

"But every time I do it and they sit there regarding me with their solemn eyes, I keep saying to myself, 'You might as well hold your breath, sister. They think it's all the bunk. They think you're just a prissy old maid telling them to be goodie-goodie and wipe their feet and not spill crumbs.'"

Influence of Movies

"Every time I've told that story about Bruce and the spider or the kind prince and the panthers, or Jefferson rescuing the pig with his best clothes on, I have vowed never to tell one again. I knew that after school about a third of the children would be at the movies watching some handsome Raffles snip the diamonds off her ladyship's neck, or sitting on their shivering spines while a hand with a gun stole out from a portiere and shot the hero in the back."

"What good was all my talk beside the beautiful crime of the movies? Like a garden hose beside Niagara or a lighted match against a volcano!"

Well, liking a good rousing show myself, one afternoon I too dropped in at the little theater below the school. It was quite dark inside and it was after I sat down that I noticed four of my young ideas right in front of me.

"It wasn't a gang show exactly but it had a heavy villain and his two bad men, all of whom decked themselves out as gentlemen and moved in the best circles. Each had his dirty work to do and he worked alone."

"I began to get an awful from the quartet in front."

"Oh, gee, I bet I know what he'll do now. He'll lie to the old man and turn hi' magnificence. Gee, ain't he dumb not to know he's lyin'?"

"You wait—he'll find out. He's good but he ain't dumb. It's these smarties that are dumb. Good people like him, are the smart ones."

"Reading for Virtue"

"In another part of the world the partner in crime had locked a girl in a hall closet. She hammered to get out. It did no good but a close-up of the lock showed it slipping."

"Four fists before me pounded into palms. 'Keep it up, Mollie, keep on tryin'' they cried excitedly. 'Aw, she's stopped! She doesn't know all she's got to do is push. That's the way when you give up too soon, ain't it, Chuck? That's like that story Miss—'"

"Shut up and watch," growled Chuck.

"In a dozen ways those boys sorted the good from the bad and rooted for virtue. It was proof they were taking my talks seriously. They were judging the movies like censors, and not myself by the movies."

In this narrative I think that all mothers and teachers will find encouragement. Example and precept do untold good. And I believe that movie producers know this too, that good influence at home and school is the decidedly essential thing and that movies are not the prime factors in daily conduct we make them out to be.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

A well outfitted bathroom can make the daily bath a real joy. And, speaking of "outfitted," we don't mean fixtures of shining metal or landscapes on the walls. Things you use when you take a bath are the items to which we refer.

Huge cakes of soap are really more economical than those of medium size. And they're much more fun to use. Rough wash cloths and a long hanging bath brush should always be hanging within reach of the person who is taking a bath.

Bath mitts are real luxuries. And, with Christmas so near, you might put in your bid for a box of them. They are simply powdered soap in a little bag of turkish toweling. Moisten the mitt and rub your body with it instead of using a cake of soap and a washcloth.

Bath ensembles assure you of non-flicking perfumed odors. If your soap and bath salts are the same scent as your bath powder, the effect will be more pleasing. The same is true of toilet water.

Many prefer toilet water to bath powder, and otherwise use both. But for the sake of your guests it is a good idea to have a little jug of toilet water in the guest bathroom. Bath oil sometimes takes the place of bath salts. A few drops of it soften and perfume the hardest water.

Why not invest some of your beauty budget money in bathroom luxuries and see for yourself how pleasant the daily bath can be?

NEXT: Budgeting for beauty.

The UNKNOWN BLOND

By Laura Lou BROOKMAN

©1933 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

On a stormy November evening DAVID BANNISTER meets a pretty blond girl and offers her a lift in the cab in which he is riding. Her husband opens and he sees a revolver inside.

Next morning Bannister reads that FRANK FRANKS, orchestra leader, has been found dead in his apartment. Police are searching for an "unknown blond" who visited King the night before. Bannister, remembering the girl in the taxi, is puzzled.

He sees her again that morning. The girl tells him her name is JULIET FRANKS and swears she knows nothing of the murder. She begs Bannister to help her and he agrees.

He goes to see his old friend, JIM FAXTON, editor of the Freeman Post, and arranges to work on the King murder case for the Post. Later he returns to the hotel to see Juliet Franco and learns she has disappeared.

Bannister goes to see the room in which King died. As he stands in the doorway something lands on his back.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

THE pain in his back was sharp and knife-like. Bannister's face twisted in agony but he did not cry out. It was his assailant that became vocal with a sharp, angry, "Me-ow!" and then repeated it again, "Me-ow! me-ow!"

A cat! It must be a cat. Bannister twisted about, reaching for the animal. The cat evidently did not like such handling and objected. Its claws dug deeper, as it tried to maintain its precarious position. At last Bannister had the animal in a firm grip, pulled it about in front of him.

But was it a cat? Bannister had never seen such a creature. For a moment he thought it was a monkey. No, it couldn't be. It was drawing away from him, issuing hissing noises that were unmistakably unfriendly, unmistakably feline.

All this while Bannister had been kneeling. Now he set the animal on the floor, got to his feet. "Me-ow!" cried the cat and backed away.

The fur over its eyes and nose and covering its chin was very dark — almost black — with the definite outline of a mask. From out this mask bright blue eyes gazed with a sinister leer. The ears were dark, too, and the feet and tail. The rest of the body was brown, shading from rich chestnut on the back to creamy ivory on the chest.

A cat? Yes. Bannister knew what it was now. The masked face made it look rather like a monkey or a raccoon but it was a cat all right. A Siamese cat, a member of that cat family known as "royal" because for centuries they were pets of Siamese royalty.

The cat withdrew still farther, circled uncertainly and then leaped agilely to a window ledge. There it sat, steadily regarding Bannister.

The man rubbed his bruised shoulders. "All right," he said, "we'll call it a truce—so long as you don't try that trick again! Lord, what claws! Keep your distance and I'll keep mine."

There were two windows in the bedroom. One on the south and one on the west. Bannister stepped to the nearest of them and looked out. Nothing below but a smooth plot of grass in the court. Beyond was the rear wing of the building, jutting out, just as did this central wing. Certainly there was no access to that window from above or below.

HE MOVED to the other window. A two-story cottage, white with a green roof, stood below hind a boxwood hedge. It was a neat cottage, rather old-fashioned. Shades were drawn at the windows. Bannister knew the place. It belonged to old Judge Price, retired now and living in Florida.

But there was nothing to be seen from that window to explain the brownish stain on the carpet. That, of course, must be where they had found Tracy King's body.

Bannister turned, giving his attention once more to the interior of the bedroom. It must have been rather untidy even before the detectives had made their search. There seemed to be so much in the room: a bed; a chest of drawers — several of them pulled out and spilling their contents; two chairs, one of white leather of modernist design; a night table holding a carafe and empty glass; a wardrobe trunk tilted on end; a small radio. Golf clubs sprawled in one corner. There was a stack of music on the radiator and a pile of magazines on the floor. There seemed to be ever so many smaller articles in the room, too — brushes and toilet articles on top of the chest of drawers; a large mirror above it; a photograph in a silver frame showing a pretty girl smiling — a Denise Lang; a cocktail shaker on the trunk; a sweater and suit of one of the chairs.

On the wall Bannister noted a large framed photograph of Tracy King himself. There were some others which Bannister assumed to be theatrical acquaintances. One he recognized as a Broadway star. Most of these photographs had inscriptions written across one corner.

Yes, the place was certainly chaotic. And yet there was nothing there that seemed out of keeping with what Bannister had learned about Tracy King. A vain man, no doubt. Extravagant or he would not have been living at the Shelby Arms. A young man who liked to give parties, judging from the tall glasses and bottles Bannister had seen in the living room. A young man, above all, who liked to have a good time and generally succeeded.

THIS door of the clothes closet was ajar. Bannister drew it back, then whistled softly to himself. Tracy King must certainly have had a weakness for clothes! Rows of suits hung there — two dozen at least. They were in shades ranging from pale beige to black. A plushy brown overcoat stood out bulkily and beside it was a tweed top coat. There were sweaters and leather jackets and even a silk-lined evening cape. A white mess jacket and a tall coat hung side by side. On the floor were shoes—more than a dozen pair—and on the shelf above Bannister could see several hats.

He closed the door with a murmur, half of disgust. It was just as he turned to go back to the living room that the object on the floor caught his eye. Bannister stooped quickly and picked it up. He was studying it a moment later when he heard the outer door open. Bannister dropped the object inside his pocket. An instant later Link, the hotel clerk, appeared in the bedroom doorway.

"Sorry to be gone so long," he apologized. "I thought it would only be a moment but there are so many things—" He did not complete the sentence. "The place is upset," he went on. "Nothing goes right! It's been that way since last night."

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"I can imagine," Bannister said dryly. "Mind showing me just how King was lying when you found him?"

The clerk agreed willingly but his description—even the demonstration he attempted — was not very clear. Bannister decided that he would have to have a look at the police photographs.

Suddenly the cat on the window ledge jumped down. Link saw it and said, "Oh, there's Rajah! I don't know what's to become of him! Mr. King thought the world of that cat. Used to bring people here especially to see him. I told the maid to see that Rajah got his meat this morning. Mr. King always had it sent in regularly. It's a valuable cat, you know. Very valuable. What's to become of it now I'm sure I don't know!"

"How about King's relatives?" Bannister asked. "Haven't they been notified?"

"If they have nobody has told me about it," the clerk said, rather aggrieved. "I suppose someone will have to take care of all these things—"

WITH a wave of his hand he indicated the personal possessions of the dead orchestra leader. "Somebody will have to attend to all this," he said. "Until there are some sort of orders everything will be left here just as it is now."

There was a small bath tending off the bedroom. Bannister inspected it, then returned to the living room.

He crossed to the windows and looked down. "No fire escapes around here, are there?" he asked. "They're at the rear."

Bannister was poking about the papers on the desk. "If it was the girl who shot him," he said suddenly, "how do you figure that she got away?"

"There's a stairway," Link explained. "It's just back of the elevator. She could have gone down the stairway and into the laundry. Then she could have crossed the hall to the tradesmen's entrance."

"And gone out the rear way," Bannister nodded solemnly. "Oh, I see!"

"It must have been the girl," Link insisted. "She was the only one who came up here."

"You saw her, did you?"

"Yes, and I'd know her any where again. Couldn't miss that green outfit."

"Suppose she wore something else?"

"I'd know her anyway," the hotel clerk declared emphatically. "I'd know her the minute I saw her!"

Bannister explored the room for another 10 minutes. There was little to be gained there, he thought, but he wanted to fix certain details in his mind. Then he said, "Well, I guess I'm through here."

They rode down to the first floor. Bannister thanked the clerk and took his leave. But he was less than half way across the lobby when a voice stopped him.

"It was a woman's voice. 'Just a minute, young man!' it called. 'Just a minute!'"

Bannister turned. He faced a short woman in a blue and gray sweater suit, hurrying toward him. The woman's cheeks were quite pink; her hair was a slightly faded titian, and her voice was determined.

"I want to see you!" the woman declared.

Think health and health will find you
As certain as the day.
And pain will lag behind you
And lose you on the way.

Think love, and love will meet you
And go wherever you go,
And fate can no more treat you
Like some malicious foe.

Think joy, and joy will bear you,
For thoughts are always heard,
And joy shall nestle near you
Like some contented bird.

What'er your woes or pain—
Bright thoughts shall bring fruition

Mrs. Ralph Routon was a Friday visitor in Texarkana.

Mrs. A. L. Johnson left Tuesday for Cleveland, Ohio, where she will spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Campbell and Mr. Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Anderson and daughter, Martha Elizabeth of Texarkana visited with friends and relatives in the city on Friday.

Miss Bertha McRae is spending the week end with friends in Malvern. Friday she attended the football game in Clarksville and will be a Saturday guest of friends in Fordyce.

As special complement to Bertha McRae, whose wedding to William Glover of Malvern, has been announced for early December. On Thursday evening at her home on South Elm street Miss Louise Hangan entertained at one of the most delightful bridge parties of the season. The spacious Hangan home afforded a beautiful setting for the six tables arranged for bridge. The reception suite was artistically decorated with lovely pink roses, with the banquet place at the bridge table being marked with a graceful bow of white tulle and pink rose buds. The bride motif was observed in the tables and score pads. In the dining room, the decorations emphasized a color scheme of yellow, the beauty table was centered with a crystal chandelier flanked by yellow chrysanthemums. In the crystal holders tied with yellow tulle, floor baskets of yellow chrysanthemums added their beauty to the decorations. The guests were greeted at the door by Miss Hangan and presented to Miss McRae. They were directed upstairs by Miss Alice Pritchard, tallies were distributed by Miss Ruth Taylor. In the score count, Miss Doris McRae made high score, and received a dainty prize, and the honoree was presented with a beautiful remembrance gift. At the close of the game, the hostess assisted by her mother, and Misses Helen McRae, Ruth Taylor and Alice Pritchard served a most tempting salad course with coffee.

Bruce McRae will arrive Saturday night from Little Rock to spend the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey McRae.

Red Cross Appeals for Members

THE 1933 poster of the American Red Cross, distributed nationwide, is an appeal for an enlarged membership. Resources were never more vitally needed than in this fourth year of economic distress. Memberships, which cost one dollar or more, are used to support the unemployment relief work of chapters and national organization; nationwide disaster relief work; health work in hundreds of communities, with special reference to preserving the health of mothers and children; safety work through teaching first aid and life saving; welfare work through six million school children who are members of the Junior Red Cross; and one of the most important tasks ever to face the Red Cross—keeping up the morale of veterans of our wars, and handling their problems of compensation payments, arising from changes in governmental regulations.

One hundred twenty disasters engaged the financial and personnel forces of the Red Cross during the past year. More than a million dollars was spent in relief of families who lost their all in hurricanes, storms, fires, earthquake and other frightful calamities.

President Roosevelt has said: "I can be counted on to foster and aid in every way in my power the great work your organization (The Red Cross) must carry on."

Can any citizen of the nation fail to do likewise?

mentioned during his White House calls. The origin of earlier reports that he was coming to discuss the New York situation is just one of those mysterious things.

Roosevelt definitely didn't want to talk politics with Al. As if by careful stage management, in came Mrs. Roosevelt and the grandchildren, Siesta and Euzie Doll. The conversation stayed on grandchildhood.

Al wouldn't have talked politics, anyway. He had kept out of the New York mayoralty fight because he thought O'Brien was a dud, McKee a stuffed shirt, and LaGuardia a radical.

He had told other Catholic University trustees that he wouldn't attend their meeting here because his failure to call at the White House would be interpreted as his snub to Roosevelt or Roosevelt's to him. So C. U. fixed up the visit with the White House.

ods of settling all outstanding questions of indebtedness and claims that permits us to hope for a speedy and satisfactory solution of these questions which both governments desire to have out of the way as soon as possible.

"Mr. Litvinoff will remain in Washington for several days for further discussions."

At these parleys with Bullitt and other experts, some officials believed the way might be cleared for a non-aggression commercial treaty.

In the propaganda agreement, the Soviet State agreed to refrain from interfering "in any manner in the internal affairs of the United States, its territories and possessions."

The letter of Litvinoff to the president dated November 16 also said the Soviet government agreed "to refrain, and to restrain all persons in government service and all organizations of the government or under its direct or indirect control, including organizations in receipt of financial assistance from it" from interfering in any way with this country's internal affairs.

The Third International, a world wide Communist organization, apparently was not covered by the Litvinoff letter. Many of the Communist high officials are also officials of the Third International but the Soviet State officials said, has steadfastly insisted that it gave no financial assistance to the International and had no control over it.

Replying to the Soviet commissar's letter on propaganda, Mr. Roosevelt said the United States would observe it also.

Religious Freedom Assured

Although officials expected little difficulty in reaching an understanding on religious liberty, the president insisted upon a clear record on this to soothe any fears of religious groups in this country.

Mr. Roosevelt went over the exchange of letters in some detail. He said that he stipulated not only that American citizens in Russia have complete freedom of worship but that no citizens of this country be denied the right to enter Russia simply because they are dissenters, or radicals.

Litvinoff assured the president that the Soviet laws guaranteed the "right to free exercise of liberty of conscience and religious worship" and

Yerger Wins Over Prescott 49 to 0

Local Negroes Swamp Nevada Team on Hope Field

Prescott holds no jinx over Hope's negro football team.

This fact was demonstrated here Friday afternoon when the Yerger High School team went on a scoring rampage, burying an inferior Prescott eleven under a 49 to 0 score.

The Yerger squad whipped the Black Wolves up and down the gridiron field, outclassing them in every department. A few minutes after the opening kick-off Hope started scoring, and from then on the game was never in doubt.

Benton, Neal, Butch and Copper tore the Prescott line to shreds and time after time took the ball for long gains on sweeping end runs.

It was Prescott's worst defeat in several seasons.

Heavy Machinery Is Industrial Key

Production and Sale of Capital Goods Next Important NRA Step

NEW YORK.—Prosperity is being retarded by the almost absolute prostration of the capital goods industries, which make the machinery and other equipment used in industry, according to Mason Britton, executive of a large publishing house, who says that the hope of capital goods manufacturers for recovery of business through "expansion" must be abandoned, and that such manufacturers, in order to help recovery, must co-operate in conducting a concerted campaign to supply general industry with replacements for half of its equipment which has been found to be obsolete.

In explanation of his stand that "we can't have any sustained prosperity in this country until the capital goods industries are revived," Mr. Britton, in a life insurance company bulletin, says that the depth of any depression "is about in direct ratio to the degree that capital goods industries are down, for the capital goods business generates the employment that gives the consumer the buying power, through which consumer manufacturers can get production."

Mr. Britton believes that the users of capital goods should be aroused to the importance of buying, and that faith in business "expansion" should be discarded. The business man who has been thinking in terms of "expansion," Mr. Britton says, must change his thought because there will be little if any expansion developing in the period ahead.

Mr. Britton advocates industrial advertising as a means of inducing users of capital goods to buy, and explains what sort of advertising should be adopted.

"Industrial organizations," he says, "should gear their advertising of capital goods to modernization, because that is the only outlet that the manufacturer of equipment will have in the country for the next few years. There is plenty of business. Fifty per cent of the equipment of this country is a big enough market for anybody, but industry must go after it in a concerted, intelligent way, and merchandise the idea that, in order to manufacture and sell a product—and make a profit—manufacturers must have better equipment."

"Old market evaluations, old methods of distribution and old advertising policies must be revised. There are new consumers, new trading for Touchdowns were made by Harper, Madison and Hargis, the latter scoring twice in the first half.

Holly, replacing Chamberlain at center, turned in a well played game, as did Kennedy, Anderson, Brownfield and Houston.

A larger crowd than was expected turned out to see the contest.

Next Friday night Horatio High School comes here. Horatio is coached by Leslie Nations, former University end. His team has won several games this season and the battle with the Bobcats next week is expected to be a tough one.

Tropical Disease Frightens Chicago

Amoebic Dysentery, Oriental Plague, Traced to Handlers of Food

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, and of the Magazine.

Recent death of Texas Guinan, famous night club hostess, brings into national prominence the outbreak of amoebic dysentery that has been prevalent in Chicago for several months. Miss Guinan's sudden death is ascribed to this disease. The epidemic is believed to be under control.

Amoebic dysentery is caused by invasion of the body by an organism.

Trail of Death

The figures indicate that the outbreak was at its height during July and August. In the meantime, cases were reported from other cities. Eight persons in Indianapolis who had been patrons in the Chicago hotel were infected, and one died.

British Leave for New Arms Meet

Envoys Hope to Bring Germany Back to Conference

LONDON, Eng. (AP)—With the blessing of King George, who expressed the hope before Parliament that disarmament difficulties could "be surmounted," two British leaders left for Geneva Friday to seek in a three-power parley a formula for Germany's return to arms discussions.

"My government have throughout taken an active part in the Disarmament Conference," said his majesty, "and the British draft presented March 16 was adopted as the basis for a proposed convention."

"I earnestly trust that the difficulties which have since arisen may be surmounted."

"The withdrawal of Germany a month ago from the deliberations at Geneva necessarily dislocated the program, but work for international disarmament between the nations must be vigorously pursued."

Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, and Capt. Anthony Eden, under-secretary for foreign affairs, will confer in Geneva with the French foreign minister, Joseph Paul-Boncour, and with an Italian representative.

As Early as 1919 He Reported Soviet Government Was Permanent

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Back of the Roosevelt-Litvinoff 10 days of negotiations which culminated in recognition of Russia, lay 16 years of diplomatic aloofness between the two governments.

Many official and unofficial efforts have been made by Soviet sympathizers to bring Communistic Russia and capitalist America together, but all were blocked until Mr. Roosevelt invited the Soviet commissar of foreign affairs to Washington.

Secretaries of State Bainbridge Colby, Charles Evans Hughes, Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson all rebuffed efforts of the Moscow government to discuss establishment of normal relations.

The Soviet repudiation of governmental and private debts, the confiscation of the property of foreigners and the fostering of the Third Communist Internationale by the Soviet Union were the grounds upon which the Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover governments declined to discuss relations.

The assistance Germany gave to Lenin in his trip from Switzerland to Russia, his Kerensky regime in Russia and associated powers against the Bolsheviks. The allies believed Germany had entered into an agreement with the Bolsheviks and was making use of them as a part of the struggle Germany was waging on the Western front.

This distrust did not wane for seven years; but most of the leading European powers granted Moscow recognition in 1924. The United States remained obdurate and kept up the fiction that the Kerensky government still lived.

William C. Bullitt, associated with President Roosevelt in the current conversations with Litvinoff, was sent to Russia early in 1919 to survey political and economic conditions for the American and British delegations to the Versailles conference, where he was associated with the American delegation.

Saturday Is Pay Day!

For Hope Star Carrier Boys

Each Hope Star carrier is his own merchant and should be paid each Saturday when he calls, as he is required to settle each Saturday night in full with the Star Publishing company for all the papers he receives. Carriers should not be expected to make repeated calls for collections, when the amount is so small, as the large number of deliveries they make, and the amount of time required in collecting from their customers does not permit this.

Any failure on the part of the subscriber to pay is a direct loss to the young man. Although the amount is small in each individual case, very many such delays or losses could be a serious matter to the carrier that serves you.

This is why the Hope Star urges you to have your dime ready when the carrier calls.

El Dorado Runs Over Hot Springs

Roy White Stars in Impressive Victory by Score of 48 to 7

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—One Roy White, who is affiliated with the Wildcat Eleven from El Dorado, as quarterback, before a crowd of 2,500 spectators Friday ran roughshod over the Hot Springs High School Trojans, scored four of El Dorado's seven touchdowns and kicked six out of seven place kicks for extra points, to defeat the Trojans, 48 to 7.

Mr. White received assistance now and then, but he didn't need it much. The Wildcats, with a heavier line and backfield, gained 413 yards from scrimmage and completed one pass for 75 yards.

Hot Springs was held scoreless until the last minute of play, when Lovell scored on a 20-yard toss from Parker.

The Trojans were played off their feet in the first quarter. White displayed sterling broken field running as the result of spinners and crisscrosses.

Magnolia Beats Teachers 19 to 0

Muleriders Win Decisively in Season's Last Home Game

MAGNOLIA, Ark.—Springing an unexpected running attack, Magnolia A. & M. Muleriders defeated the State Teachers College Beas, 19 to 0 in the final home game of the season here Friday.

Billy Parker, Will Curtis and Carroll Gillum made long, consistent gains through the line, off the tackles and around the ends which coupled with airtight defense enabled the Riders to dominate the game.

The first touchdown came in the first minutes of play on a forward pass from Mark Parker to Sanders following recovery of a fumble by Dunaway of the opening kick-off on the Teachers 15-yard line by Bellamy, Magnolia tackle. Magnolia was penalized twice for offside play after which the scoring pass was made, Will Curtis plunged across the line for the extra point.
